110th ANNIVERSARY
TSINGHUA UNIVERSITY

The 1st International Symposium on Advanced Gas Turbine Engines

The 1st International Symposium on Advanced Gas Turbine Engines will convene at the Tsinghua University, Beijing, China from Wednesday, 21 April through Thursday, 22 April 2021. Scientists, engineers, entrepreneurs, and others interested in advanced gas turbine engines are invited to attend and participate in this international conference.

Tsinghua University, established in 1911, ranks as the top university in China. This symposium is also part of a series of events to celebrate the university's upcoming 110th anniversary. The technical program will consist of about 10 invited lectures delivered by distinguished scientists and engineers from world-wide renowned universities, research institutes and engine industries. The symposium aims to create an environment to exchange the research fronts and technology development regarding gas turbine engines and promote collaborations among eminent universities, national laboratories and industries. The goals and objectives of the symposium are highlighted as:

- Discuss the latest and most notable research achievements in the fundamental research, digital design tools and advanced manufacturing for gas turbine engines.
- Review the courses from successful academic and industrial research programs, and identify challenges and opportunities for future research efforts.
- Foster future collaboration and interaction among Tsinghua research personnel and the global research community.
